

Follow @nro

Like 150k

NATIONAL REVIEW ONLINE

June 2 Issue

Look Inside!

Subscribe Print
Subscribe Digital
Gift: NR Print
Gift: NR / Digital

Home	The Corner	The Agenda	The Campaign Spot	Home Front	Right Field	Bench Memos	Media Blog	Feed	Planet Gore	Events
Audio, Video & Galleries		Larry Kudlow	David Pryce-Jones	Phi Beta Cons	Critical Condition	Human Exceptionalism		Tweet Tracker
Log In	Register	ARTICLES	AUTHORS	RSS	STORE	DONATE	MEDIA KIT	MAGAZINE HELP	CONTACT	NR INSTITUTE

Clown of the Senate June 2, 2014

Inequality and the Fate of Capitalism May 19, 2014

The Climate Inquisitor May 5, 2014

Restore the Religious Freedom Restoration Act April 21, 2014

12 Month Archive . . .

NATIONAL REVIEW / Digital

Latest Issue Archive by Year Your Account Send

JUNE 2, 2014, ISSUE

The Neo-Malthusians

Smaller Faster Lighter Denser Cheaper: How Innovation Keeps Proving the Catastrophists Wrong, by Robert Bryce (PublicAffairs, 400 pp., $27.99)

By John Daniel Davidson

Share 0

Tweet 0

+1 0

Print

Text - +

The earth is changing at a catastrophic rate. Oceans are rising, animals are dying off, and widespread drought and famine are on the horizon.

That's not a summary of Darren Aronofsky's big-budget, gnostic-environmentalist film Noah, but of a March report by the United Nations' Intergovernmental Panel on Climate Change (IPCC), which warns of dire consequences if leading nations do not take steps immediately to curb the effects of climate change and contain the damage already underway.

You can keep reading right now. No subscription required. It's this easy:

TERM

Article ($0.25)

NR / Digital ($2.99 / 1 MO)

NR / Digital ($19.99 / 1 YR)

Already subscribed? Login to NRO or Login with Swishu

Contents

JUNE 2, 2014 | VOLUME LXVI, NO. 10

Apps:
iPhone/iPad
Android

Comments 0

ROBERT BRYCE
Author of Power Hungry

Articles

Time for Truth on Benghazi

The select committee should forget about politics and just find out what happened.
By Andrew C. McCarthy

Bill de Blasio Gets Schooled

Under pressure, he decides that charter schools aren't so bad after all.
By Joshua Dunn

Tiananmen? Never Heard of It

Twenty-five years later, the Communist party is suppressing memory of the massacre.
By Gordon G. Chang

Ike as Weapon

The use and abuse of Eisenhower's Farewell Address, with its warning about the 'military-industrial complex.'
By Jay Nordlinger

Long Live Roller Coasters!

They exemplify American ingenuity -- and American life.
By Charles C. W. Cooke

Features

Clown of the Senate

But Harry Reid's attempts to restrict freedom of speech aren't funny.

CARD

EXPIRES

 /

CVV2

EMAIL MY RECEIPT TO

BUY FOR $0.25

- I agree to Swishu's Terms of Service.
- Put me on the National Review mailing list.

1 2 Next >

0 Comments

National Review Online

Login ▾

Sort by Newest ▾

Share Favorite ★

Start the discussion...

Be the first to comment.

Subscribe

Add Disqus to your site

By Kevin D. Williamson

Tall Cotton

Arkansas's GOP Senate hopeful is in a hurry — to save the country.

By John J. Miller

The Right Goal for Central Banks

When the target is nominal, results are phenomenal.

By David Beckworth & Ramesh Ponnuru

The Tory Imagination

Reflections on the limits of Whiggery.

By Michael Knox Beran

Books, Arts & Manners

A Christo Garland

Roger Kimball reviews But Enough About You: Essays, by Christopher Buckley.

The Neo-Malthusians

John Daniel Davidson reviews Smaller Faster Lighter Denser Cheaper: How Innovation Keeps Proving the Catastrophists Wrong, by Robert Bryce.

The Forge of Today's Europe

Daniel Johnson reviews The Great War for Peace, by William Mulligan.

Reinhart at Home

Tim Cavanaugh discusses Thomas Berger.

Everyman on the Vigilante Trail

Ross Douthat reviews Blue Ruin.

Sections

Letters to the Editor

The Week

The Long View Rob Long

Athwart James Lileks

Poetry Anna Akhmatova

Happy Warrior Jonah Goldberg